Claiborne Chatham-1800-The Stone-MissPosted by: Sue Dean

We are in search of the other half of a sharpening stone that (2) Chatham brothers broke in half with each keeping a half so that when future generations meet they would know that they were kin. We have one half of the stone that was passed down from Claiborne Chatham to Bryant Chatham to Claiborne Chatham to Harry Chatham to Edith Chatham to Sue Dean. If anyone has any knowledge of this please reply. The fartherest we have back is where the Chathams were in South Carolina moving to south Mississippi. We don't know which Chatham brothers it began with.

Sue,

I have the family tree starting with the Creel Family (1700s) and going downward including the marriage of Jency Creel to Bryant Chatham. Incidentally, your name is in the tree. My grandmother was Mary Kiziah Chatham, daughter of Claiborne Chatham and Mary Hough, third wife of Claiborne. The story of the stone is very interesting and worth investigating. Thanks for enlightening me. Good luck in your research.

My mother-in-law is a Chatham descendent, being born and raised in southern Mississippi. We have a document prepared by a relative listing the lineage for part of the Chatham family. Not familiar with the story of the stone. Civil War story we hear is that family members went into the battlefield to exhume family members and bring them home to re-bury. E-mail is currently down at home. We will post a new message when it is up again. Meanwhile contact via work e-mail.

Bob:

Re the Civil War story:

One of my earliest childhood memories was when my Grandfather, John Booth, showed me a grave at Hopewell Methodist Church Cemetery in Jasper Co. MS & told me that it was the grave of my Great-grandmother's uncle, Capt. John W. White, who was shot in the throat in the Civil War.

Recently, when I began to research my family's history, a 2nd cousin reaffirmed that memory & told me the rest of the story:

William Oscar Chatham, born 6/13/1841 & his uncle, Capt. John W. White, were killed at the Battle of Chicamauga. William Oscar's parents were John William Chatham & Rebecca White Chatham.

Wm. Oscar was killed either on Sept. 19, the 1st day of the battle, or Sept. 20, 1863. John White was killed in the early morning of the 20th. They were both buried on the battlefield.

When the news of their deaths reached home, their families traveled to GA to retrieve their beloved sons. They exhumed the bodies & brought them home in a wagon, buried under a load of coal, & buried them in their own church cemetery.

I am trying to research the family of my grandmother, Carilla "Kay" Harrison Booth. One of her sisters was Mittie Harrison Chatham. So far I have not found a thing on the Harrisons, but I am hoping to contact someone from Mittie's family who may have some info re that branch. Maybe your wife knows something about Mittie Harrison Chatham's ancestry?
